

1 American Indians and Buffalo Soldiers

2 From ABC CLIO’s American History: The West, 1850-1900 Eras

3
4 As American settlement pushed across the Appalachian Mountains in the late 18th
5 century, hostilities increased between Native Americans and the United States. After 6 Andrew Jackson became president in 1828, he oversaw the forced removal of Cherokee,
7 Choctaw, Creek, Chickasaw, and Seminole tribes west across the Mississippi River, but
8 pushing the Indians further west turned out to be a temporary solution.

9
10 Americans were pushing west as well. The California gold rush in 1848, the Homestead
11 Act passed in 1862, and the completion of the transcontinental railroad in 1869 all
12 encouraged westward migration. Between 1862 and 1890, approximately 2 million
13 people settled on nearly 375,000 farms claimed through the Homestead Act. These white
14 settlers encountered resistance from Native Americans, who were being forced off of the 15 land they had inhabited for centuries. The government’s solution was to confine the 16 Native Americans to reservations in areas deemed unsuitable for white settlement.

17
18 A New Type of Soldier

19
20 Indian resistance to the removals resulted in the American Indian wars of the mid- and
21 late 19th century. These conflicts, in addition to the security needs of white settlers,
22 required a permanent military force to be placed on the frontier. After the Civil War,
23 many of these soldiers were African Americans.

24
25 In 1866, President Andrew Johnson signed an act of Congress that resulted in the 26 formation of six regiments of African-American troops. Most of the recruits to newly 27 authorized cavalry and infantry regiments were experienced soldiers who had served in 28 the Civil War. They were eager to enlist in these new regiments because they saw an 29 opportunity for social and economic betterment. The U.S. Army provided a means for 30 food, clothing, shelter, and equally important, the chance for an education to overcome
31 the mandated illiteracy of the slavery system. The $13 a month offered as pay wasn’t 32 much, but it was more than many of the recruits would probably have been able to earn
33 as civilians in the post-Civil War years.

34
35 When the Cheyenne and Kiowa first saw these dark soldiers with their textured black
36 hair, they were reminded of the buffalo that was such an important part of their lives, so
37 they called these men buffalo soldiers. Soon, the Indians attributed other buffalo-like
38 qualities to the soldiers as well. This new type of soldier was uncommonly tough,
39 demonstrating real heroism in one conflict after another.

43 Until the early 1890s, the buffalo soldiers made up 20% of all American cavalry forces
44 on the Western frontier and quickly won a reputation as a force to be reckoned with. Two 45 of these regiments, the Ninth and 10th Cavalries, were involved in some of the most
46 ferocious Indian battles that took place in the West.

47
48 One main source of conflict was U.S. fear of the Ghost Dance movement, a messianic
49 movement among the western tribes. Led by a Paiute named Wovoka, the movement
50 promised a new order in which the Indians would be forever free from white aggression
51 and intervention. At the time, most Western tribes were discouraged over their status in 52 life and the loss of their traditional culture. The movement made the U.S. government
53 nervous. Though Wovoka preached nonviolence, some Sioux leaders urged that whites
54 be driven out of the West.

55
56 In the late fall of 1890, the conflict between whites and Native Americans came to a
57 disastrous head. The War Department ordered an army buildup at the Pine Ridge
58 Reservation (in present-day South Dakota), and 500 to 600 hostile ghost dancers
59 gathered. Tension between the two groups, which included the buffalo soldiers of the 60 Ninth Cavalry, resulted in the Wounded Knee Massacre on December 28. More than 150
61 Sioux were killed. After that, the Ghost Dance movement waned.

62 63 Differing Perspectives

64
65 Waning Indian resistance meant more freedom for westward expansion. The Dawes Act
66 broke up Indian tribal lands and authorized the president to distribute reservation lands to 67 Indians. The act aimed to make Indians into independent farmers; instead, it made it easy
68 for whites to buy or lease Indian lands...

69
70 Americans streamed onto the lands previously held by Native Americans. They were
71 aided in the settlement of the West by the very soldiers who had helped end the Indian
72 presence. As formidable as they were, the buffalo soldiers did much more than fight.
73 They were largely responsible for the miles of telegraph lines that permitted
74 communication through the southwest frontier. They built and repaired forts and 75 barracks, explored and mapped unknown territory, and built roads that would eventually
76 give land-hungry settlers access to the frontier. The buffalo soldiers protected miners
77 from Indian raids and sometimes even the Indians themselves from unlawful incursions
78 onto reservation property.

79
80 The buffalo soldiers and the Native Americans were two unique groups existing together
81 on the frontier. Both groups faced oppression at the hands of whites. Many buffalo
82 soldiers joined the army after the Civil War to escape the South... They were proud of 83 their uniforms and their roles as U.S. military professionals. Native Americans, on the 84 other hand, were left with little pride. Forced to live on reservations, they watched as 85 whites gradually took over the entire North American continent.

Writing Prompt:

Native Americans and African Americans are both oppressed groups in American history. Based on this text, how did the era of westward expansion affect the lives of the buffalo soldiers and American Indians discussed?

In a paragraph, provide 2 pieces of evidence from the text for each group, Native Americans and buffalo soldiers, to support your answer. Cite the evidence correctly by using line numbers (Lines 3-4) at the end of the sentence. With your own reasoning, connect the evidence to the thesis statement.

Some possible evidence in support of students' answers to this question is:

Native Americans:

"These white settlers encountered resistance from Native Americans, who were being forced off the land they had inhabited for centuries." (Lines 13-15)

"The government solution was to confine Native Americans to reservations in areas deemed unsuitable for white settlement." (Lines 15-16)

"The conflict between whites and Native Americans... resulted in the Wounded Knee Massacre on December 28th." (Lines 56, 60)

"... most western tribes were discouraged over their status in life and the loss of their traditional culture." (Lines 51-52)

"One main source of conflict was U.S. fear over the Ghost Dance movement, the messianic movement among the western tribes." (Lines 48-49)

"The Dawes Act broke up Indian tribal lands and authorized the president to distribute reservations lands..." (Lines 65-67)

Buffalo Soldiers:

"President Andrew Johnson signed an act of Congress that resulted in the formation of 6 regiments of African American troops. Most of the recruits to newly authorized cavalry infantry regiments were experienced soldiers who had served in Civil War." (Lines 25-28)

"Buffalo soldiers were eager to enlist ... because they saw an opportunity for social and economic betterment." (Lines 28-29)

"The U.S. army provided a means for food, clothing, shelter, and equally important, a chance for an education to overcome the mandated illiteracy of the slavery system." (Lines 29-31)

"Tension between two groups,... resulted in the Wounded Knee Massacre on December 28th." (Lines 59-60)

"The buffalo soldiers did much more than fight... they were responsible for the miles of telegraph lines... they built and repaired forts and barracks, explored and mapped unknown territory, and built roads... across the frontier." (Lines 72-76)

"The buffalo soldiers protected miners from Indian raids." (Lines 76-77)

"The $13 a month offered as pay wasn't much, but it was more than many of the recruits would probably have been able to earn as civilians in the post Civil War years. (Lines 31-33)

"Many buffalo soldiers joined the army after the Civil War to escape the South." (Lines 81-82)
